Welcome to EARTH 2007 in Sendai

Growing economies require resources which are expected to eventually be exhausted if we continue consuming them at the present rate. Nevertheless, the present period can be called the most active in the history of human beings in terms of material production and consumption, although there are great differences between different parts of the world. The 3Rs (Reduce, Reuse, Recycle) and waste treatments have become more and more significant with the rapid expansion of economies around the world, especially in East Asia, to achieve sustainable development. We are currently at the stage where reviews are being carried out to determine what kind of circulatory society should be created and what the stance of industry should be in order to achieve such a society. Harmonization of the social system and technical developments are essential for a circulatory society.

The 3Rs and waste treatments are growing areas in metal production industries. There is no doubt they are coming to play a major role in these industries, and further collaboration between different research areas is necessary to advance these technologies. This is indeed a paradigm shift. Against this background, EARTH 2007 covers a wide range of topics concerning the 3Rs and waste treatments, including eco-materials and soil remediation. We believe this reflects the magnitude of enthusiasm in this field throughout the world.

Professor NAKAMURA Takashi, Chairman of EARTH2007
